Education and Public Works

Guest Speaker: Mary Laura Bragg

National Director Policy/Implementation
Foundation for Excellence in Education

Dear Colleague:

We are writing to invite you to join us for a very important legislative information session on education.

Many of you are aware of the dramatic improvement in performance enjoyed by students in the State of Florida. The architects of the Florida model will be joining us at the Statehouse next week. This session is open to all members of the General Assembly, agencies and staff.

About Mary Laura Bragg

A former classroom teacher, Mary Laura Bragg directed the statewide literacy initiative, Just Read, Florida! As director, she was responsible for crafting and implementing the policies that helped place a command focus on reading instruction there. Ms. Bragg has served on advisory groups on adolescent literacy for both the Alliance for Excellent Education and the National Governors Association. She is also a member of Carnegie Corporation of New York's Advisory Council on Advancing Adolescent Literacy.

The Florida Story

Since 1998, Florida has undergone an education transformation. Beginning with a belief that all children can learn and harnessing the power of principle-based policy entrepreneurship, Florida leaders came together around a bi-partisan agenda of data-driven accountability, high expectations, funding for achievement, choice for families and rewarding effective teachers. The good news: students at the bottom proved the biggest winners from Florida's no-nonsense reforms.

While improvements didn't happen overnight, the fruits of Florida's long-term revolution into a national model for higher standards, accountability and options continues to be seen in the achievement of Florida students and in the hope Florida's example extends to other states across the country.

Please join us on June 5 to hear the Florida Story and interact with Mary Laura and her team.

Sincerely,

Rep. Phillip D. Owens
Chairman, Education & Public Works Committee

Rep. Andrew S. Patrick
Chairman, K-12 Education Subcommittee
