Since they began their investigation last year, senators on the Department of Social Services Oversight Committee have heard passionate testimony from parents and child advocates all saying the agency is grossly mishandling child welfare cases.

Note: Gov. Nikki Haley's spokesman, Doug Mayer, released a statement about these allegations. "There is nothing more important than the welfare of our children and under Director Koller's watch child deaths have decreased 25 percent, adoptions have increased 11 percent, and we have successfully moved over 20,000 people from welfare to work. Governor Haley has and will continue to support her efforts to protect and better the lives of South Carolina families and children," said Mayer.

State Sen. Joel Lourie, D-Richland, called for the chief of the Department of Social Services to step down Wednesday after hearing testimony alleging fear and intimidation at the state agency and concerns from coroners overseeing child-death investigations.

S.C. Political News:

The State: Henry McMaster likely to run for lieutenant governor
<http://www.thestate.com/2014/03/19/3335491/henry-mcmaster-plans-to-run-for.html#storylink=cpy>

Andrew Shain

Former S.C. Attorney General Henry McMaster likely to run for lieutenant governor, his political consultant said Wednesday. This would be the Columbia Republican's second run for the state's No. 2 office. He lost the 1990 lieutenant governor's race to Democrat Nick Theodore. McMaster, 66, last ran for office in an unsuccessful Republican bid for governor in 2010.
