

PAID FOR BY CARPER FOR SENATE

There've been some big changes in the Carper family in 2014. Chris packed up all his belongings in Albany, N.Y. this summer and headed for the Big Apple, where he now lives with eight million of his closest friends. He's still doing the Lord's work — making large buildings there and all over the northeastern part of the U.S. more energy efficient. He must be pretty good at it, too, as Honeywell promoted him again at the beginning of this year. Meanwhile, earlier this year, Ben packed it up in Richmond and he headed back up I-95 with his things, drove right through Delaware and kept on going until he reached the City of Brotherly Love. There, he unpacked and went to work for Morgan Stanley. He's living the life, as is his big brother, but they still find time to come home and see their mom and dad quite a bit. They love it! And speaking of their parents, Martha began her sixth year of teaching full-time at the University of Delaware this fall. In her spare time, she has continued working in a volunteer capacity, serving on the board of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Delaware. This statewide non-profit helps make it possible for some 20,000 boys and girls throughout the First State to improve their grades, play sports, stay out of trouble, be exposed to positive role models and prepare to live productive lives. And, then, there's Tom. For the past two years, he has chaired the Senate's Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, as well as the Senate's Subcommittee on Transportation and Infrastructure. He's been a busy boy, but he doesn't complain. He feels fortunate to serve the people of Delaware as one of their two U.S. Senators and, most days, they genuinely seem to appreciate it. ☺

We hope this greeting finds you - at least figuratively - on top of the world! Most of us spend time throughout the year looking for joy for ourselves and our families. Sometimes, we find it. Sometimes, we don't. As you look for joy both now and in the New Year, we hope you'll join us in taking to heart these timeless words from the Hindu faith:

"In the joy of others lies our own."

Havi's wishing you and those you love good health and abundant joy in this Holy Season and in all the seasons of your lives. Warmest regards,

Tom, Maria, Chris & Ben Cooper
