Ethics Advisory Opinion 16-06 published

A web-based referral service violates the prohibition of sharing fees with a non-lawyer as described in Rule 5.4(a) where:

(1) Attorney signs up for the service by agreeing to offer certain flat fee services and the fee for the service is set by the internet advertising directory website (service); (2) the service makes the referral to the attorney, who then contacts the client to arrange a meeting and begin the representation; (3) the service handles payment processing from the client and holds the funds until the service is completed, (4) upon completion of the work, the service transfers the full amount of the fee to attorney's account; and (5) upon completion of the work, the service charges the attorney a "per service marketing fee" which seems to be based upon the service provided and is only incurred when the lawyer provides the service. In the alternative assuming, for the purposes of this question only, that the arrangement does not violate Rule 5.4(a), the arrangement would violate the Rule 7.2(c) prohibition of paying for a referral and is not saved by the exceptions found in Rule 7.2(c) (1), (2) or (3). Read the full opinion online.

SC Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts

Play the guitar? Enjoy strolling through an art show? You just might have what it takes to become a volunteer with the SC Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts! The organization is seeking a few volunteers to help low-income artists and arts organizations in SC with their legal issues. Assistance might be as basic as a collection letter or advice on obtaining non-profit status. Each month a list of artists in need is screened and posted to the SCVLA distribution list. You decide what fits into your skill set and the time you have to give! For more information or to apply to be a volunteer, contact Pamela Robinson at robinspd@law.sc.edu or (803) 777-3405 or visit www.scvolunteerlawyersforthearts.org.

ADVANCE SHEET UPDATE

July 27, 2016

In this appeal from family court, the S.C. Court of Appeals affirmed in part and reversed in part. The court affirmed the family court's finding that it had jurisdiction to modify the alimony award but modified the family court's alimony reduction, finding a reduction from $8,000 to $6,000 per month to be appropriate based upon the circumstances of the parties' respective financial positions. The court further reversed the automatic decrease in alimony based on Wife's anticipated initial eligibility for social security benefits at age 62 and also reversed the family court's decision as to attorney's fees, ordering Husband to contribute $48,835 toward payment of Wife's attorney's fees and costs. Woods v. Woods, Op. No. 5430 (S.C. Ct. App. filed July 27, 2016) (Shearouse Adv. Sh. 30 at 16) is available online.

In this marital litigation, the court reversed and remanded for a new trial. The court held, inter alia, that while the granting of the motion to intervene by Brother may have been within the discretion of the family court, the court's actions in repeatedly permitting him to participate (and even control) certain decisions unrelated to the protection of Brother's property interests were erroneous. Additionally, the court found the family court's analysis of Husband's income to be incomplete and erroneous. Because the family court improperly calculated Husband's imputed income, the court reversed the denial of alimony and remanded for the family court to conduct an appropriate alimony analysis and a new child support calculation.

Stoney v. Stoney, Op. No. 5431 (S.C. Ct. App. filed July 27, 2016) (Shearouse Adv. Sh. 30 at 40) is available online.

June 28, 2016

In this appeal from the filing of a class action, the Fourth Circuit ruled that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(d) regarding costs gives trial judges the discretion to award attorney's fees. The court opined that plaintiffs may be responsible for defendants' attorneys' fees when the underlying statute defines costs as including attorney's fees. The Court also adopted a portion of the Seventh Circuit's reasoning that plaintiffs may have a liability for attorney's fees when they have acted "in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly or for oppressive reasons." The Court concluded that while 41(d) may permit the award of attorney's fees under certain circumstances, those circumstances were not present in this case. The case was therefore vacated, reversed and remanded.

Andrews v. America's Living Centers, No. 15-1658, decided June 28, 2016 (4th Cir.) is available online.
