Dear Ms. McDermott, thank you for your letter. I am heartened to hear that some of the family of those killed have begun to forgive, and I am gratified to hear that your son is doing all he can to move forward and to try and make things positive for others with whom he is incarcerated.

Senator Gerald Malloy leads the Senate on this issue, and I expect him to file legislation this coming year to address it. I have tremendous respect for Senator Malloy, and I look forward to his legislation. That bill will move through the Judiciary Committee, upon which I do not serve, but I will talk with Senator Malloy about it, and I will give my full attention when it comes to the Senate floor. I am very open to reasonable and demonstratively productive changes in sentencing law, and I certainly will keep your thoughts in mind when the Senate takes up this issue.

I wish you and your son courage and faith as you move forward. Ann and I will be praying for you both.
