Barbara and Randy Wright are small business owners residing in Lexington, SC. They own and operate adult day centers that provide services to seniors, Alzheimer's patients and persons with disabilities. They currently operate three centers in the Cayce/West Columbia area. This is the grand opening for their fourth center, also in Lexington county. They currently have contracts with DHHS and DDSN to provide services. This center will focus on vulnerable adults with disabilities. In addition to providing traditional day services, her centers also have health care and case management components. Her work is a fine example of preventive services that help folks remain in their homes and communities.

Barbara would like the Lt. Governor to join her and her husband to cut the ribbon on their new center. If he wishes, he may at that time offer comments. After the ribbon cutting there will be a tour of the new center as well as afternoon refreshments. His time commitment should be no more than an hour (of course, he is most welcome to stay longer).

The guest list includes persons who will be served by the center along with their family members, local community leaders and others. The last center they opened resulted in between 50 and 75 attendees. Based on her guest list at present, there will likely be 75 – 100 people in attendance for this event. She is sending invitations this week.
