Dear Governor Haley:

It has come to my attention that you are thinking about the possibility of allowing refugees from the Middle East to settle in our State of South Carolina. You also seem to have confidence in the Federal Government to be able to somehow only admit the ones with no criminal or terrorist records. I personally hope that this is not true.

First of all these people are mostly 18 to 35 years old males and are the perfect age to have been radicalized. They are most likely not on any watch list and have never left their home Country. Second, ISIS has already send out chatter stating they are sending their agents of death mixed in with these refugees coming our way. They are for the most part will not be carrying any Identification or information about themselves, may have changed their name, and will not be on any database.

I am not the only one who fears some these people are agents of death and would lay low for a while blending into our landscape getting prepared to commit acts of terror when called.

Mitt Romney is calling for the West to stop the "insanity" of accepting refugees from the Middle East — particularly young men — and for the United States to wage war on the Islamic State to "eradicate it once and for all."

In a commentary in The Washington Post, the former governor of Massachusetts charges ISIS is "a cancer that metastasized" on President Barack Obama's watch

The issue of security checks on refugees was called into question by FBI Director James Comey in October, when he told a House committee that checking refugees against a database won't do anything if the U.S. doesn't have any data on these refugees and in my opinion there is no way of obtaining it.

Governor, you are a great Governor and I truly believe you will make the right decision. However after saying this I question if the States will have any say in the decision making process. The States may have to make sure they have the means necessary to setup their own database with all of the necessary identification markers, such as finger prints, DNA and complete blood test results, some will have to be treated for medical problems, before turning them loose.

God Bless you and South Carolina,
