Hi Danny, nice to hear from you. I appreciate that context. I do think in tweeting from his "Bryant for Governor" account, he was making an effort to remind potential voters that he was a driving force behind this legislative effort. McMaster, meanwhile, will surely be reminding people that he's the governor who signed the bill into law, in the event it reaches that stage in the process. That's all I was suggesting.

I'm not writing about this but if I do I will remember to make it clear that Bryant has a long history with this bill.

Thanks again for being in touch,

Emma

Emma, I understand your point in this Tweet, but LG Bryant is, after all, the lead sponsor of the bill. He's sponsored the same bill for years.

Today, the South Carolina Senate Judiciary Committee voted to protect the unborn. I am thankful my Personhood legislation has made it out of committee, and I pray it is finally put to a vote on the Senate floor. #ProLife
