

POLITICS

REGNERY BOOKS

HEALTH

MONEY & INVESTING

Human Events®

POWERFUL CONSERVATIVE VOICES

NEWS & POLITICS GUNS & PATRIOTS MONEY HEALTH NEWSLETTERS

COLUMNISTS CONTRIBUTORS E-LETTERS REDSTATE ABOUT

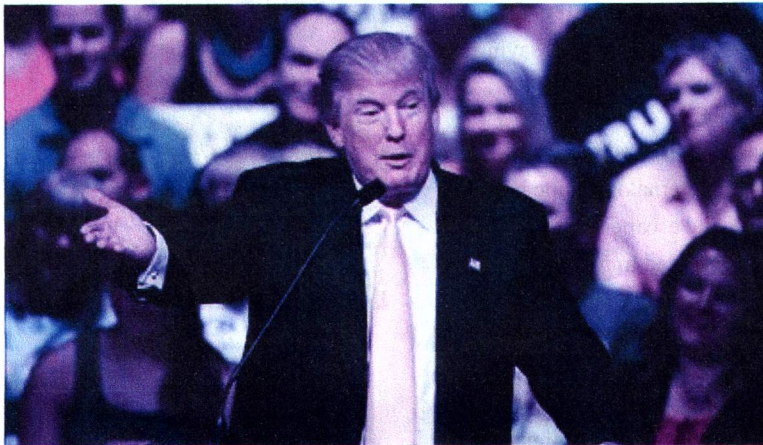

What Are You Looking For?

GO »

Donald Trump: Still Right About Mexican Rapists

Follow

Wednesday Aug 5, 2015 4:37 PM

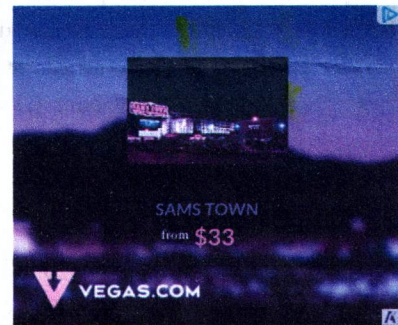

Share on Facebook 239

 297 SHARES

There's a cultural acceptance of child rape in Latino culture that doesn't exist in even the most dysfunctional American ghettos. When it comes to child rape, the whole family gets involved. (They are family-oriented!)

In a 2011 GQ magazine story about a statutory rape case in Texas, the victim's illegal alien mother, Maria, described her own sexual abuse back in Mexico.

ADVERTISEMENT

MORE VIDEOS:

HUMAN EVENTS READER'S CHOICE

POPULAR COMMENTS EMAILED

Low Haley it's their culture
NOT OURS! stop it, get rid of them & you & Washington should condemn the Mexican leaders every day. They are Scum Bags

"She was 5, she says, when her stepfather started telling her to touch him.

Hand here, mouth there. The abuse went on and on, became her childhood, really. At 12, when she finally worked up the desperate courage to report the abuse and was placed in foster care, she says her mother begged her to recant — the family needed the stepdad's paycheck. So Maria complied. She was returned home, where her stepdad continued to molest her. When she talks about it, tears stream down her face."

Far from "I am woman, hear me roar," these are cultures where women help the men rape kids.

Maria dismissed the firestorm of publicity surrounding the sexual precocity of her own daughter, laughingly referring to the 11-year-old rape victim as "my wild child." She even criticized the girl's older sisters for complaining about the young girl's promiscuous clothing choices, saying — of an 11-year-old: "Well, she's got the body, so leave her alone."

In 2013, illegal immigrant Bertha Leticia Rayo was arrested for allowing her former husband, an illegal immigrant from Guatemala, to rape her 4-year-old daughter, then assisting his unsuccessful escape from the police. The rapist, Aroldo Guerra-Garcia, was also aided in his escape attempt by another woman, Krystal Galindo. (Kind of a ladies man, was Aroldo.)

That same year, the government busted up a child pornography operation in Illinois being run out of the home of three illegal aliens from Mexico, including a woman. At least one of them, Jorge Muhedano-Hernandez, had already been deported once. (Peoria Journal Star headline: "Bloomington men plead guilty to false documents.")

The Baby Hope case in New York City began when a Mexican illegal alien, Conrado Juarez, raped and murdered his 4-year-old cousin, Anjelica Castillo. His sister helped him dispose of the body. Police found the little girl's corpse in a cooler off the Henry Hudson Parkway, but the case went unsolved for two decades, because none of the murdered girl's extended illegal alien family ever reported her missing. Anjelica's mother later told the police she always suspected the tiny corpse in the cooler was her daughter's, but never told anyone.

In 2014, Isidro Garcia was arrested in Bell Gardens, California, accused of drugging and kidnapping the 15-year-old daughter of his girlfriend, then What's That Got to Do with the Price of a Big Mac in China?

Nicholas Vardy | Tuesday Aug 4, 2015 9:27

AM

Donald Trump: Still Right About Mexican Rapists

Ann Coulter | Wednesday Aug 5,

2015 4:37 PM

The 10 Questions You Have to Answer Before You Buy Any Stock — Part 3

Chris Versace | Wednesday Aug 5, 2015

2:43 PM

Shock Videos Expose Moral Blind Spots

Steven Green | Tuesday Aug 4,

2015 9:19 AM

Gun Lies

John Stossel | Wednesday Aug 5,

TODAY'S POLL QUESTION:

Are you surprised they finally found the plane?

- ☐ Yes, I thought it wouldn't happen
- ☐ No, I knew it would happen eventually
- ☐ Huh?

SUBMIT

forcing the girl to marry him and bear his child. The mother had suspected Garcia, then 31 years old, had been raping her teenage daughter, but did nothing. All three were illegal aliens from Mexico, making this another case for the "Not Our Problem" file.

In 2007, Mexican illegal immigrant Luis Casarez was convicted in New Mexico for repeatedly raping a 3-year-old and an 8-year-old. During his sentencing, Casarez borrowed Marco Rubio's talking points about hardworking illegal immigrants with roots in America. "I have been here for many years," Casarez told the judge — incongruously, through a translator. "That's why," he added, "I've been working instead of getting involved with problems." Other than that one thing.

Two weeks after Luis Casarez was indicted for child rape, his son, Luis Casarez Jr., was indicted in a separate case of child rape.

When the crime is this bizarre, it's not "anecdotal." "Child rape perpetrated by more than one family member" isn't your run-of-the-mill crime. It's rather like discovering dozens of cannibalism cases in specific neighborhoods.

How many fourth-generation American father-son child-rape duos do we have? How many American brother-sister teams are conspiring in child rape and murder? How many mothers are helping their boyfriends and husbands get away with raping their own children?

And how many 12-year-old American girls are giving birth — to the delight of their parents?

In some immigrant enclaves, the police have simply given up on pursuing statutory rape cases with Hispanic victims. They say that after being notified by hospital administrators that a 12-year-old has given birth and the father is in his 30s, they'll show up at the girl's house — and be greeted by her parents calling the pregnancy a "blessing."

This happens all the time, they say.

And yet, in the entire American media, there have been more stories about a rape by Duke lacrosse players that didn't happen than about the slew of child rapes by Hispanics that did because Democrats want the votes and businesses want the cheap labor. No wonder they hate Trump.

Donald Trump: Still Right About Mexican Rapists / Ann Coulter

FBI Investigating Hillary Clinton's Use of Private Email To Send and Receive Classified Information / Katie Pavlich

Hot Pursuit: Bernie Sanders Tied With Hillary Clinton in New Hampshire / Katie Pavlich

Marine Arrested For Accidental Gun Possession in D.C., David Gregory Still On The Loose / Katie Pavlich

Mike Lee Torches Planned Parenthood: 'Their Real Adversary is the Truth' / Guy

Get this culture out of our Country!

Quotes of the day | Allahpundit

Obama to head out on vacation as planned, not bother wooing Dems on Iran deal | Mary Katharine Ham

Video: Visitors leaving National Archives struggle with the First Amendment | Matt Vespa

Bidenmania hides a deeper problem: the Democratic hench | FH

The muslim culture (shia law etc) is worse get it out of this Country

Share on Facebook 239 297 SHARES

Would you vote for Marco Rubio in the 2016 presidential election?

☐ Yes