Thank you both for this ID and for the letter, on background.

I'm curious if you could respond to the question of at what point Gov. Haley might ask the state legislature to revisit the 2007 law to make it easier for the S.C. DMV and other related agencies to make at least some of the necessary changes in order to comply with the federal mandate?

Appreciate your time and help!

Quote from Haley press secretary Chaney Adams, "South Carolina law, passed in 2007, prohibits our state from complying with Real ID, and the governor's office will continue to follow that law. State officials, however, will meet with the Department of Homeland Security to discuss the security of South Carolina driver's licenses and identification cards in order to make sure our citizens are not inconvenienced by any federal mandate."
