As a lifelong resident of South Carolina it just baffles me as to the amount of people in our state that receive State and Government help. I raised my 3 children as a single mother. We were on a tight budget but we manages to make it ok. I want say great by any means, but we all survived.

My son was injured on his job and has been out of work for various surgeries etc since last May. He also has a wife and children to support but thanks to our laws and the Insurance company taking there on sweet time to settle his claim (still not settled) and him doing everything that they required they are now being evicted from there home. They will all have to separate the family up for none of us has a place big enough for all of them. They applied for "help" only to be told that since his wife works they do not meet the guide lines. (She does not make enough to support their family)

As I am crying and telling this story to someone they said and I quote "LIE" thats what others do and the State never checks on them.

It just makes me SICK. One example is a 30 year old woman has never worked and does not want to work as she says "Why should I, the state pays for everything for me".

If all of us had the had that mentality we should all just quit work and let the State take care of all of us.

Its just a sad, sad system. And we wonder why our State is always at the bottom of most list and have jokes told about us on late night TV.
