Time Warner Takeover Pushes Need For Uniform Privacy Regs

AT&T roused privacy advocates in unveiling an $85.4 billion cash-and-stock takeover of Time Warner over the weekend, a move that steps up pressure to replace the traditional sectorial approach to privacy regulation with more stringent and uniform rules to counter the increasingly blurry lines between the telecom and tech industries.

ABA Cautions CFPB On Proposed Disclosure Rule Changes

The American Bar Association has urged the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to tweak certain parts of its proposed amendments to the agency's information and disclosure rules, saying that the proposals could compromise attorney-client privilege by allowing for greater sharing of protected information.

GWB Defendant Breaks With Witnesses Over Lane Closures

A prosecutor on Wednesday confronted a former public official on trial over the George Washington Bridge lane closures about how her testimony conflicts with witness accounts that she took part in a revenge scheme against a mayor and later indicated that she did not know anything about the closures.

Romney Derides Lack Of Political Courage For Reforms

Former Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney decried a lack of political courage on both sides of the aisle in the federal government in a speech Wednesday, saying neither side has demonstrated the ability to work toward known solutions on issues like entitlements, regulation and litigation reform.

Analysis

GWB Defense May Have Opening In Conspirator's Shady Past

Prosecutors have a trove of emails and text messages to pull from in delivering their closing statement Thursday in the George Washington Bridge lane-closing trial, but defense counsel may cast a shadow over that material by focusing on the history of political mischief and falsehoods of the government's star witness, attorneys say.

TSA Must Boost Airport Access Badge Oversight, OIG Says

The Transportation Security Administration is still falling short in its oversight of security badges for employees working in sensitive areas at U.S. airports and must bolster procedures to ensure that badges are properly accounted for, according to a U.S. Department of Homeland Security Office of Inspector General report made public on Wednesday.

FCC Asked To Nix NY's 'Brazen' $170M Broadband Fund Bid

A group representing wireless internet providers has pressured the Federal Communications Commission to deny the state of New York's "brazen" bid for $170.4 million in federal broadband development funding, arguing that to bypass a competitive bidding process for the money would be unfair to consumers in other states and would violate FCC rules.

Comcast Sues Nashville Over 'Climb Once' Utility Rule

Comcast became the second major telecommunications giant on Tuesday to sue the city in federal court over its "climb-once" law that it says makes it easier for third-party companies to interfere with its equipment on utility poles.

The former head of the U.S. Copyright Office has refused to serve in her reassigned role as senior adviser for digital strategy for the Library of Congress, opting to resign instead, library officials said.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

When Your Client Is The President

I was given immediate responsibility for responding to the Iran-Contra crisis. My problem as a lawyer was what to do about all the requests for files, documents and other information that were coming in from investigators. Ultimately, it came down to this: What do I believe about my client? says Peter Wallison, who served as White House counsel for President Ronald Reagan.

Changes To IRS Appeals May Create Problems For Taxpayers

New changes to the Internal Revenue Service's approach for handling tax appeals may alter the dynamics of the process in potentially problematic ways for taxpayers. But the IRS appears to be considering a further change that could have even worse impacts on the appeals process, say attorneys from Steptoe & Johnson LLP.

Self-Disclosing Criminal Export Violations: The New Guidance

Recent guidance from the U.S. Department of Justice applies the Yates memo to DOJ investigations of export control and sanctions violations. When confronted with a potential violation, companies will have to make the strategic decision whether to seek the benefits of the voluntary self-disclosure program or risk significantly higher penalties and fines, say attorneys with Arnold & Porter LLP.

Dial Or Push-Button: Oral Arguments In Appeal Of FCC Order

Last week, the D.C. Circuit heard oral arguments in ACA International v. Federal Communications Commission. Attorneys from Sutherland Asbill & Brennan LLP summarize the primary issues, which may provide much-needed clarity on the Telephone Consumer Protection Act's scope once the D.C. Circuit makes a decision.

The Road Ahead: Transportation Innovation Funding In 2017

The federal government has recently released numerous initiatives and announcements aimed at facilitating transportation innovation. Industry stakeholders need to understand that their participation across seemingly disparate agencies and programs can be enormously beneficial, if not critical, to the successful deployment of these initiatives, say Nathaniel T. Kron and Taite R. McDonald of Holland & Knight LLP.

LEGAL INDUSTRY

Law360 Names Attys Who Moved Up The Firm Ranks In Q3

A promotion to partner or election to practice group chair means lots of well-deserved recognition within a firm and in the larger legal community. Law360 reveals the list of attorneys whose commitment to excellence earned them highly coveted spots in the law firm leadership ranks. Find out if your old legal friends — or rivals — moved up in the third quarter of the year, and let the office chatter begin.

GC Egos Can Get In The Way Of Lawsuit Risk Assessment

In-house lawyers too often let pride soften their take on the risk of new lawsuits and need more truth-telling from their firm lawyers, a panel of general counsels said Wednesday at a symposium in Manhattan.

Justice Thomas Denounces Politicization Of High Court

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas lamented both the state of political partisanship gripping the nation's capital and the spillover effects it has had on the integrity of the high court, broadly proclaiming to a D.C. audience Wednesday evening that "we're destroying our institutions."

Sotomayor Expresses Nostalgia For Previous 2nd Circ. Gig

Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor on Wednesday expressed a deep measure of nostalgia for her previous job as a Second Circuit judge, describing a freewheeling and collegial environment in which the views of junior jurists were as welcome as those of long-timers.

Commodities Firm's Ex-GC Alleges 'Good Ol' Boys' Workplace

The former general counsel of a commodity trading company accused it in a Connecticut federal court suit on Tuesday of age and sex discrimination, contending she was underpaid and that the company's all-male board fired her because she was an older woman in a "male-dominated industry."

Rainmaker Q&A: Orrick's Christina Guerola Sarchio

For one of my clients it took me 10 years to get my first matter from them. You have to remember that there are lots of lawyers out there, and lots of relationships already in place. Persistence and resilience are key, says Christina Guerola Sarchio, chairwoman of the class action strike team at Orrick Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP.

Rainmaker Q&A: Rutan & Tucker's Shigenobu Itoh

It's opportunities where perhaps you don't actually land an engagement that can turn out to be great substantive learning experiences for young lawyers in developing their nonlegal skills. They can serve as a catalyst to conduct some personal introspection, says Shigenobu Itoh, partner at Rutan & Tucker LLP.
