Dear Lt. Gov. Bryant,

What does it mean to hold schools accountable? What would a healthy accountability landscape look like? The public's trust in our current strategy for holding K-12 schools accountable is broken. High-stakes tests have, at times, punished teachers, and they don't align with what families say they want from schools.

How do we move forward from here? EdChoice convened focus groups of diverse K-12 education stakeholders to find out. And today we released a report that compiles what we heard from those focus groups.

To find out exactly what the focus groups told us, download the paper today.
