Training programs aim to meet labor needs

Are you having trouble finding and/or retaining workers? If so, the S.C. Department of Employment and Workforce through the local work areas can help you fill your workforce needs.

- Incumbent Worker Training (IWT) helps you stay on the cutting edge and increase productivity and quality by providing employees with needed training in order for the business to remain competitive.
- On-The-Job Training (OJT) offers a solution for businesses that are challenged with hiring, promoting and retaining employees who lack the specialized knowledge to perform their jobs effectively.
- Registered Apprenticeship is a time-tested strategy for employee development that combines supervised on-the-job learning with job-related classroom education.

Two more counties receive Work Ready certification

Aiken and Union counties have met the specified workforce and education goals needed to receive certification through the South Carolina Work Ready Communities initiative. Richland and Jasper are the only two counties that have not received certification. Learn about the importance of becoming a supporting business by clicking the link below.
