Dear Leigh,

It was great speaking with you earlier. Per your request, I have included the agenda for the July 9th REMI seminar in Columbia as an attachment for your reference.

As I mentioned on the phone, the event is free, and whoever attends from the governor's office is welcome to watch as many or as few presentations as they might find interesting. We just ask that they register for the event ahead of time so we can ensure enough space for all those attending. If you do decide to send someone, please have them e-mail or call me, and I'll be happy to reserve them a space.

Additionally, our Washington D.C. office recently completed some in-house research on the regional effects of federal budget sequestration. It's not listed on the agenda, but the economist presenting in Columbia would be happy to discuss this research in depth if there is interest from those attending.

If there are any questions, please don't hesitate to call me at (413) 549-1169 or to e-mail me at this address.

Regards,
