

From: Veldran, Katherine
To: Joe McKeown (joepmckeown@gmail.com) <joepmckeown@gmail.com>
Date: 6/23/2015 10:39:48 AM
Subject: SC Front Pages – Tuesday, June 23, 2015

---

Joe,
It was great seeing you and the Senator yesterday.
Please let me know if you need anything.
Thank you,
Katherine

Katherine F. Veldran
Director of Legislative Affairs | Office of Governor Nikki Haley
O: 803-734-5124 | C: 803-767-7583
KatherineVeldran@gov.sc.gov

---

From: Symmes, Brian
Sent: Tuesday, June 23, 2015 10:22 AM
Subject: SC Front Pages – Tuesday, June 23, 2015

SC Front Pages – Tuesday, June 23, 2015

The Post and Courier

FOUNDED 1803 • WINNER OF THE 2015 PULITZER PRIZE FOR PUBLIC SERVICE

Tuesday, June 23, 2015

POSTANDCOURIER.COM

Charleston, SC 6801

Editorial

Time to furl the Confederate flag

The Confederate flag was raised over the Statehouse dome in 1962 to mark the centennial of the Civil War. It flew there for nearly 40 years before being relocated to a nearby Confederate memorial as part of a hard-fought fight for compromise.

But it's clear that the compromise hasn't succeeded, recognizing what the flag's rebirth means for many South Carolinians. It's time for the Legislature to pull the flag in the spirit of good will and reconciliation.

Such an act would be in the spirit of the original compromise, which was approved by lawmakers of good will, black and white, to remove the flag from a position of sovereignty and place it in what was viewed as an appropriate place near the Statehouse grounds.

Inside
Wednesday: But there is no better flag than an appropriate place for the flag at the Statehouse — not in the aftermath of Wednesday's tragic murder of nine people in Emanuel AME Church on Calhoun Street. Among those killed was the Rev. Clementa Pinckney, who was also a state senator.

The senator, Orlando Scott, has been associated with white supremacy ideology. Among information that has surfaced on the Internet are several pictures of him with a Confederate flag. In one of those photos he is also holding a handgun.

In the wake of that terrible tragedy, the flag tour has returned with a new intensity. Some officials view it as a confirmation of South Carolina's adherence to the failed policies of bygone years — slavery, secession, Jim Crow, segregation and the state's initial opposition to federal civil rights laws.

Advocates of the flag say that it represents the struggle of this state during the national Civil War — a war in which more than 10,000 South Carolinians died. It was a war fought by the ancestors of many today's South Carolinians, and it reminds those descendants of the gallantry and sacrifice during that bloody conflict.

For other South Carolinians, however, the flag has nothing but dire associations that reflect the race hatred and lawlessness of those, such as the Ku Klux Klan, who appropriated it for their own purposes. Flag opponents include black and white South Carolinians.

In the spirit of reconciliation, the Confederate flag needs to be removed from the Statehouse grounds.

On Monday, Gov. Nikki Haley gave her support to furling the flag. "We are not going to allow this symbol to divide us any longer," she said. A growing number of legislative leaders support the idea.

The legislature has the opportunity to remove the flag before the end of this month's extended session. It can review the terms of the session, and vote to bring the flag down.

Do it. In honor of the nine people who were killed at Emanuel AME Church.

Do it now.

Haley: Remove flag once, for all

State's 2 U.S. senators join push in wake of Charleston massacre

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley embraces U.S. Sen. Tim Scott during a news conference in the South Carolina Statehouse on Monday in Columbia. Haley said the Confederate flag should be moved from the grounds of the state Capitol, taking her position on the divisive symbol amid growing calls for it to be removed.

BY SCHUYLER KROPP
and CYNTHIA RICHARDSON
cbsnews.com/2015/06/23/nikki-haley-tim-scott-confederate-flag/

COLUMBIA — Gov. Nikki Haley and South Carolina's two U.S. senators on Monday joined the growing chorus calling for removing the Confederate flag from the Statehouse grounds after a lone gunman killed nine black people just inside Emanuel AME Church in Charleston.

Haley declared during a Statehouse news conference that South Carolina had "surrodded in the east" last week, and it is time to fold the flag for good.

"Today, we are here in a moment of unity in our state. It is time to fold the flag once and for all," Haley said.

North Charleston Mayor Keith Summey calls for removal of the Confederate flag from the Statehouse grounds during a press conference in North Charleston on Monday.

Please see HALEY, Page A1

North Charleston Mayor Keith Summey calls for removal of the Confederate flag from the Statehouse grounds during a press conference in North Charleston on Monday.

More coverage

Male crime law revised by state legislators, Page A6.

Standards classes $100 in wake of shooting, Page A6.

Eviction ban lifted in Emanuel AME Church shooting, Page A6.

President Obama grants clemency early from anti-drug group, Page A7.

Shonda Rhimes honored at City Hall prayer service, Page A7.

Goose Creek church looks to its future after Emanuel AME, Page A8.

Obama's 'not cured' makes point with epithet, Page A8.

USC, Clemson both agree battle flag should come down, Page C1.

Many S.C. lawmakers silent on flag stance

Survey still stirs strong sentiments

BY GLENN SMITH
gsmith@postandcourier.com

Deep, strong feelings exist on both sides of the Confederate flag debate, but a majority of South Carolina lawmakers dragged-argued on Monday to pin down where they stand on removing the flag from the Statehouse grounds.

The Post and Courier reached out to all 120 House and Senate members in an attempt to determine how much support existed among the flag's supporters and detractors.

A team of reporters called, sent emails and tweeted to these lawmakers throughout the day, but were met by silence from many.

Please see POLL, Page A3

President to deliver eulogy for Pinckney

First lady, Biden to attend service

BY MELISSA MCGINTON
and ROBERT BEIRNE
rmbeirne@postandcourier.com

President Barack Obama will deliver the eulogy Friday at the Rev. Clementa Pinckney's funeral, a White House official said.

First lady Michelle Obama and Vice President Joe Biden also will travel to Charleston to attend the services for the fallen Democrat, who also served as a state senator, the official confirmed Monday.

Pinckney was one of nine people fatally shot Wednesday night during a Bible study at Emanuel AME Church.

Please see OBAMA, Page A7

Pretty cloudy,
High 90 Low 70;
Complete 5-day
forecast B10

Bridge ..... B9
Business ..... B11
Gardens ..... C5
Golf ..... D9

Historical ..... B12
Internat'l ..... F10
Satellite ..... D7
Marine ..... D2
Entertain ..... D4

Sports ..... C1
Satellite ..... D7
Marine ..... D2
Entertain ..... D4
Post Health ..... B11

Charleston
Deals
Today

Sellout Sunset Party
Buy $30 for two tickets.
See B12

CLEMSON BASEBALL, 1C
LEE LANDS
'DREAM JOB'

SPORTS, 1C
Spieth
making history

The Greenville News

A GANNETT COMPANY

TUESDAY,
JUNE 23, 2015
GREENVILLEONLINE.COM

USA TODAY

CANDIDATES DISTANCE THEMSELVES FROM WHITE SUPREMIST

PAGE 1B

'A MOMENT OF UNITY'

Lawmakers urged to remove Confederate battle flag from Statehouse grounds

TIM SMITH
STAFF WRITER
TCSMITH@GREENVILLENEWS.COM

COLUMBIA — Gov. Nikki Haley on Monday urged lawmakers to remove the Confederate battle flag from the Statehouse grounds, saying it does not represent the future of the state and has been used as a symbol of hatred.

"Today, we are here in a moment of unity in our state, without ill will, to say it's time to move the flag from the capitol grounds," Haley said to thunderous applause and cheers from more than 100 people who filled the Statehouse upstairs lobby and lined the railings above.

Haley addressed the issue following a private meeting with state lawmakers from both chambers and both parties.

She was backed during her statement by lawmakers from both parties, the president of the State NAACP Conference and members of the state's congressional delegation, including former Gov. Mark Sanford and the state's senators, Lindsey Graham and Tim Scott.

Haley said if lawmakers do not address the issue before leaving for the summer, she will call a special session solely for the purpose of removing the flag from the Statehouse grounds.

The issue over the flag's presence re-emerged last week with the brutal shooting deaths of nine people at a historic black church in Charleston. The white man charged with their murders sported a Confederate flag license plate on his car and has been linked to a website displaying photos that appear to be him holding Confederate flags.

The hatty flag was removed from the Statehouse dome in 2000 in a legislative compromise and raised on a pole near the Confederate Soldiers' Monument on the north side of the Statehouse, just steps from Main Street in Columbia. Under terms of the compromise, it can be removed only by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

Haley said many in the state see the flag as a symbol of

TM DOLIBOC/AP
South Carolina Gov.
Nikki Haley, center,
embraces U.S. Sen. Tim
Scott during a news conference in the
South Carolina State
House on Monday in Columbia. Haley said
the Confederate flag
should come down
from the grounds of the state Capitol,
revealing her position
on the divisive symbol amid growing calls for
it to be removed.

The New York Times

VOL. CIXIV ... NO. 56,906

©2015 The New York Times

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 2015

$2.50

For more than a month, no aid could reach Wau, South Sudan, because of the fighting.

Crisis Spreads In South Sudan As War Rages

By MARK KALLODIN

MALAKAL, South Sudan — In places where the fighting is here, no one is even attempting to count the dead.

Nearly half the population of the world's newest nation, South Sudan, is in danger of going hungry. New atrocities are reported almost every day. And more than 1.5 million people have fled their homes; the vast majority to swampy villages where they hope rising waters during the rainy season will keep them safe from marauding soldiers.

"There is no more country," said John Kiernan, 34, who has spent much of his nation's existence sheltered in a camp on a United Nations base. "I don't know how the fighting stops now."

It has been less than two years since a power struggle between the nation's leaders plunged South Sudan into chaos, inflaming old ethnic tensions that almost immediately tore this new country apart.

Despite repeated attempts at peace, none of the deadliest fighting of the civil war has ended in the last few months.

The warring leaders are unflinchingly entrenched in their positions, and the kinds of abuses that shocked the world early in the conflict, including the use of child soldiers and deliberate ac-

Newark Schools Chief, Picked by Christie, Is Out

By KATE ZERNIKE

Comi Anderson, the superintendent of the Newark public school system who became a lightning rod in the debate over education reform in New Jersey and nationally, resigned on Monday, eight months before her contract was to expire.

An advisor and longtime friend to former Mayor Cory A. Booker and appointed by Gov. Chris Christie, Ms. Anderson had facedounded by persistent team students, parents and local leaders.

For more than a year, she had lobbied openly with the city's populist new mayor, Ron J. Barack, a former high school principal who was elected last year on a promise to return Newark — and its schools, which have been under state control for 20 years — to Newarkers.

Ms. Anderson was appointed in 2011, just as a $100 million grant from the Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg had set up the long-troubled school district — the state's largest, with some of the nation's most disadvantaged children — to become a national model for change. Ms. Anderson, 48, used some of that money to establish merit-based pay in a teacher's contract that was hailed even by national unions as a groundbreaking compromise.

She resisted the push by Mr. Booker, a Democrat who is now the state's junior senator, and Mr. Christie, a Republican, to expand charter schools, fearing that they drained motivated families and money from traditional schools. But she also alienated many parents with her negotiations.

Continued on Page A10

Grading Common Core: No Teachers Required

The tests are not necessarily judged by teachers, which has drawn some criticism. Page A11.

With Tap of Taylor Swift's Fingers, Apple Had to Change Its Tune

By DENIS SABAO

In an age of depressed record sales, her albums sell by the millions. Her tunes fill arenas around the world. And a complimentary sweet to her nearly 60 million followers can help kickstart another singer's career.

But as Taylor Swift's victory in a one-day battle against Apple this week showed, she also has more power to influence the music business itself, at a time of deep anxiety among artists big and small about the value of their work. These days, the concern is about the value of music in the digital age, and by taking on Apple — and Spotify before it — Ms. Swift has emerged as perhaps the most effective negotiator in the business, for her own benefit as well as others'.

"She is the most powerful person in the music industry," said David Lowery of the bands Cracker and Camper Van Beethoven, and an advocate for artists' rights. "She is able to bring the debate to the mainstream."

Ms. Swift reaches the masses through her adept use of social media, whether teasing a new album on Instagram or talking on industry economics on her blog. On Sunday morning, Ms. Swift wrote a diplomatic but stern

Tumblr post telling Apple to take for not paying royalties on test drives of its new streaming music service, set to open on June 30.

"We don't ask you for free iPones," she wrote. "Please don't ask us to provide you with our music for no compensation."

By midnight Sunday, Apple — one of the most powerful companies in the world — had capitulated to the 25-year-old pop star.

Continued on Page B10

INTERNATIONAL A10

NYC 117-20

Manhunt Turns North Again

Officials say DNA evidence indicated that two inmates escaped recently at a burning纠正了about 15 miles from the prison they had fled. PAGE A11

FBI Hacking Inquiry

ARTS C1-B

Governor Joins the Call To Take Down Rebel Flag

Noting South Carolina's Pain, Haley Wants Symbol Gone From Capitol Grounds

This article is by Frances Robles, Richard Fausset and Michael D. Shear.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Gov. Nikki R. Haley called on Monday for South Carolina to do what just a week ago seemed politically impossible — remove the Confederate battle flag from its perch at front of the State House building here. She argued that a symbol long revered by many Southerners was, for sure, after the church massacre in Charleston, "deeply offensive symbol of a brutally offensive past."

"The events of this week call upon us to look at this in a different way," said Ms. Haley, an Indian-American, who is the first member of an ethnic minority to serve as governor of the state as well as the first woman.

She spoke at an afternoon news conference, surrounded by Democratic and Republican lawmakers, including both of the state's United States senators, Lindsey Graham and Tim Scott, an African-American. "Today we are here in a moment of unity in our state, without ill will, to say it's time to move the flag from the capital grounds," she said.

It was a dramatic turnaround for Ms. Haley, a second-term Republican governor who over her five years in the job has displayed little interest in addressing the intensely divisive issue of the flag. But her new position demonstrated the powerful shock that last Wednesday's killings at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church have delivered to the political status quo, authorizing leaders at the highest levels.

On Monday, the White House announced that President Obama will travel to Charleston on Friday and deliver the eulogy for the Rev. Clementa C. Pinckney, the slain pastor of the Emanuel Church and a state senator. The political aftermath from the shootings were also felt in Mississippi, where the House speaker, a Republican, unexpectedly declared in a statement

Monday night that the Mississippi state flag, which includes the Confederate banner, "has become a point of offense that needs to be removed."

Interviews suggested that Ms. Haley's rapidly evolving position on the flag was shaped by several factors: the horror of seeing the unsightly banner waving with it in photos; her conversations with congregates at the church; increasing pressure from South Carolina business leaders to remove a controversial vestige of the Confederacy. (Continued on Page A12)

Group Promotes White Primacy, And G.O.P. Ties

By MICHAEL D. SHEAR

WASHINGTON — It was a single word, just six letters long, but one that had not been spoken by an American president in public for generations.

President Obama invoked the word "nigger" in a podcast interview released on Monday to drive home his point that slavery still "casts a long shadow" on American life. But in the process he touched a raw nerve in a country struggling to confront racism and hatred in the days after nine black parishioners were killed during Bible study in a South Carolina church.

"We're not cured of it," Mr. Obama said of racism during an interview for a "WTF With Marc Maron" podcast. "And it's not just a matter of it not being polite to say nigger in public. That's not the measure of whether racism still exists or not."

For part of the hourlong conversation with Mr. Maron, the country's first black presidential candidate explained that race relations had improved in his lifetime. But in acknowledging that racism is still deeply embedded in the United States as a "part of our DNA," Mr. Obama turned to a rarely uttered word. His use of

Continued on Page A12

Clinton on Racial Divisions

Hillary Clinton's handling of the subject has changed since her 2008 campaign. Page A13.

Continued on Page A13

HARRY WINSTON
RARE JEWELS OF THE WORLD

USA TODAY

06.23.15

A GANNETT COMPANY

TAYLOR SWIFT:
IS SHE THE MOST POWERFUL FORCE IN MUSIC?

IN MONEY

NEWSLINE

IN NEWS

Israel and Hamas deny Gaza crimes

Both rejected a U.N. investigation suggesting each side committed war crimes last year.

IN MONEY

Martha Stewart Living Is sold

Sequential Brands Group pays $363M, but Stewart stays involved.

General Mills to cut out artificial flavors, colors

IN SPORTS

Report: Rose bet on Reds as player

IN LIFE

Farrell's new life is a natural high

He is sober and starring in HBO's 'True Detective.'

HOME DELIVERY
1-800-872-0001
USATODAYSERVICE.COM

0 89503 02009 s
©2015 USA TODAY. All rights reserved.

USA SNAPSHTOS

Inmates gone AWOL

2,000
inmates escaped from U.S. state institutions in 2013, a dramatic fall from 14,000 in 1993.

Source: Bureau of Justice Statistics
10-year period 1993-2013. © 2015 USA TODAY

SOUTH CAROLINA GOVERNOR: 'MOVE THE FLAG'

IN MONEY

- Companies not rushing to do business in South Carolina

IN NEWS

- Obama uses 'N' word to make a point on race relations
- Walmart to stop selling Confederate flag items
- Rep. Reider: Not too soon to talk gun control

BAILEY AND HOGUE/ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Confederate flag flies next to a monument to victims of the Civil War in Columbia, S.C., on Saturday.

State's leader acknowledges 'tough history' on racial issues

Tamiee McElroy
and Bart Johnson
USA TODAY

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called Monday for the removal of the Confederate flag from the Statehouse grounds after Wednesday's killing of nine black church members by a white gunman who allegedly expressed racist sentiments.

"It's time to move the flag from the Capitol grounds," Haley said to applause at a news conference, where she was flanked by the state's congressional delegation and other leaders.

"On matters of race, South

KIRK MURphy/USA TODAY

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called for state legislators to address removing the Confederate flag from the capital.

Carolina has a tough history," Haley said. "We don't need reminders."

Haley said that if lawmakers didn't debate removing the flag this summer, she would call them back for a special session. "The time for action is coming soon," she said.

Local and national civil rights activists have demanded the flag's removal. President Obama said the flag should be removed and placed in a museum. Obama will travel to Charleston on Friday to deliver the eulogy for one of the church shooting victims, the Rev. Clementa Pinckney.

Reince Priebus, chairman of the Republican National Committee, also called for removing the flag. "This flag has become too divisive and too hurtful for too many of our fellow Americans," he said.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said the flag "continues to be a painful reminder of racial oppression to many" and "the time for a state to fly it has long since passed."

Charleston Mayor Joseph Riley Jr., a Democrat, said hate groups have appropriated the flag. "We can't put it in a public place where it can give any oxygen to hate-filled people," he said.

The Confederate flag became a focus of attention after the Charleston killings Wednesday because it harkens to the Civil War, when slavery ended. Supporters of the flag contend it is historically significant as a memorial to Confederate soldiers.

STORY CONTINUES ON 26

GOP backpedals from supremacist donor

Earl Holt has given thousands to several presidential hopefuls

Predetra Scheulen
USA TODAY

AP/WIDEWORLD/RICK SANTORUM

AP/WIDEWORLD/TED CRUZ

AP/WIDEWORLD/RAND PAUL

GETTY IMAGES/SCOTT WALKER

current White House contenders: Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker and former Pennsylvania senator Rick Santorum, according to news accounts and campaign finance records.

By late Monday afternoon, all four said they were donating Holt's contributions to charity.

Cruz, who initially planned to refund the campaign contributions, said the funds would be better used to help the victims' families and will instead contribute $11,000 to the Mother Emanuel Hope Fund, said Rick Tyler, his spokesman.

Paul's leadership PAC has received $2,250 from Holt. Paul's spokesman Doug Stanford said the PAC also is donating the contributions to the victims' fund.

Santorum said he also would give away the money. "Rather than put more money back in the pockets of such an individual, my 2012 campaign committee will be donating the amount of his past donations to the Mother Emanuel Hope Fund to support the victims of this tragedy," he said.

Walker, who has received $3,500 from Holt since 2011, will give the money to charity, spokeswoman Ashley Strong said.

The Southern Poverty Law Center has described the Council of Conservative Citizens as a "hate group." The organization's principles include the goal of ensuring that "the American people and government should remain European in their composition and character." The council also opposes "all efforts to mix the races of mankind."

Contributing: Debrah Sladek and Debra Shragow

ADVERTISEMENT

They say business is personal. We say have a plan for both.

Whether you're building your business or ready to address your exit strategy, we can help formulate and execute a plan that integrates your goals for your business, your family and your future. Take the first step and call 866-803-5857 or visit northerntrust.com/planboth

Northern Trust

WEALTH MANAGEMENT
ASSET MANAGEMENT
ASSET SERVICING

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES News Corp.

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 2015 • VOL. CCLXV NO. 115

WSJ.com

★★★ $3.00

DJIA 18,197.76 +103.89 +0.6% NASDAQ 5,153.97 +0.7% NYSE 26,126.19 +1.1% S&P 500 2,142.25 +2.0% 10-YR TREAS. + 2.32% YM/2.342% OIL 39.63 +10.07 GOLD $1,183.00 +$17.80 EURO 1.1349 +0.0036

What's News

Business & Finance

• 7 Williams said it hired advisors to help it review strategic alternatives, including a sale of the pipeline firm after rejecting a roughly $4.8 billion unsolicited takeover. A1

• Sales of existing homes surged 5.4% in May from April, buoyed in part by the return of younger buyers. A3

• Taylor Swift scored one against Apple in a battle over royalties, but the real significance of her suit will turn on still-undisclosed details. B1

• Hedge-fund firm Citadel has emerged as a top bidder in interest-rate swaps, a market long dominated by banks. C1

• Citadel is preparing to roll out a new stand-alone stock-picking division. CC

• The Supreme Court struck down a raisin price-support program because it requires growers to surrender their crops to the government. CC

• Takata overlooked internal signs of defective air bags for years and at one point halted global safety audits, a congressional report said. B1

• The Dow industrials rose 102.91 points to 18,185.29 and the Nasdaq set a record. European stocks rallied. C4

• Canada said it had laid charges against nine parties in connection with a deadly 2013 oil-train derailment. B4

• Martha Stewart Living reached a deal to be bought by Sequential for $263 million. B1

• General Mills will strip artificial flavors and colors from cereals that contain them. CC

South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley said Monday the Confederate flag should come down from the grounds of the state Capitol. She was flanked by officials, including, on her right, Rep. James Clyburn, and on her left, Sen. Tim Scott, Rep. Mark Sanford and Sen. Lindsey Graham.

Governor: Time to Furl Flag

South Carolina
lawmakers asked to take down Confederate
symbol after shooting

By JOHN DAWSON
AND CAMERON McNAUL

CHAMBLEE, S.C.—South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called Monday for the Confederate battle flag to be taken down from the Statehouse grounds as pressure mounted on state officials five days after the killing of nine African Americans in a historic church.

"We are not going to allow this symbol to divide us any longer," Ms. Haley said, applause erupting as she spoke, flanked by more than 30 state political leaders in the lobby of the Statehouse.

The South Carolina legislature has to agree to remove the flag, which flies outside the Statehouse under a brokered compromise. Ms. Haley, a Republican, said she has directed the legislature to take up the matter this summer and would call a special session if it doesn't.

The calls to remove the flag, both from within and outside the state, came in the wake of the slayings at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston. Read more African Methodist Episcopal Church. African American Dylan Roof, a 22-year-old white man who allegedly uttered racist statements to his victims, had a Confederate flag vanity plate on his car, officials said. Mr. Roof, who was arrested Thursday, the day after the shooting, hasn't entered a plea.

Ms. Haley and other South Carolina officials initially declined to discuss removing the flag, saying the issue should wait until after funerals for the victims of the attack. Her remarks on Monday followed meetings with state and federal legislators, along with business leaders, according to the South Carolina General Assembly.

Please see FLAG page A6

The Confederate flag flies on the Capitol grounds in Columbia, S.C.

World- Wide

• Greece's creditors suggested that a deal was in sight after a proposal by Athens made a significant concession on pension cuts. A1

• South Carolina Gov. Haley called for the Confederate battle flag to be taken down from the Statehouse grounds, following the Charleston killings. A1

• Clinton has emerged with a firm grip on Democratic voters and leads over three potential GOP rivals, a Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll found. A4

• Iran and Western officials for the first time publicly said they were willing to go past a June 30 deadline to seal a final nuclear deal. A9

• A U.N. panel said both Israel and Palestinians may have committed war crimes during the 2014 Gaza conflict. A7

• Afghan officials said security forces repelled a Taliban attack on Afghanistan's parliament building. A7

• The Pentagon committed troops and new military gear to a NATO force designed to deter Russian aggression. A11

• EU foreign ministers extended by four weeks negotiations on Russia until the

Cheap Gas Fuels Push For Pipeline Mergers

By ALICE SLOAN

Low oil-and-gas prices have pushed to shake up yet another part of the nation's energy economy, spawning a minor battle among companies that own the key pipelines that move fuels around the country.

Williams Cos., a large natural-gas pipeline operator, said it lined bankers and lawyers to help it review strategic alternatives, including a sale after rejections a roughly $16 billion unsolicited takeover that would have been the largest energy deal in the U.S. this year.

Shares in the Tulsa, Okla.-based company soared to an all-time high of $60.86, up 28%, giving the more than 100-year-old company a market valuation of $46.54 billion. Shares of its would-be buyer fell nearly 5% to $56.06.

Cheap energy has stronger companies across the industry—

Tense Homecoming In Cities Liberated From Iraq Militants

By NICK MOLONEY

In the 20-year-old former

Islamic State was driven out of Moshul, the Sunnis' hometown in central Iraq six months ago, and since then, he and his family have tried every few days to leave an armament park where they are living to go home.

Islamic State was driven out of Moshul, the Sunnis' hometown in central Iraq six months ago, and since then, he and his family have tried every few days to leave an armament park where they are living to go home.

For the 20-year-old former

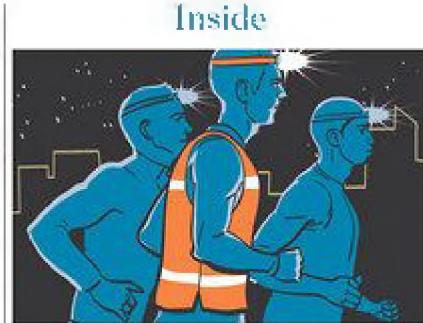

Some 80 miles to the north, in contrast, families returning to Tikrit in the past week had a far more peaceful journey. In luggage-laden cars, they the city recaptured from the Sunni extremists of Islamic State three months ago. Police checked returning residents against a database of known or suspected Islamic State collaborators, then methodically herded them back into Tikrit.

Sunni-majority Tikrit is now at the center of a government campaign to rebuild and re-populate swathes of the country and mend the fractured social fabric, even as the fight against militants continues. Islamic State has claimed its territorial conquests on the Iraqi provinces dominated by the Sunni minority, from which the group initially drew its support.

Tikrit and Vazirib, both in Saladin province, illustrate the challenges Iraq faces in trying to resettle some of nearly three million displaced people in areas recuperated from the group.

Inside

Find Triathlon Training Time

Turning commutes into training! Busy professionals share tips for making time to train in three sports.

BUSINESS & TECH | BI

Shaving Market Swivels to the Web

The fast-growing online business for razors and blades has caught market leader

Real estate hot again

Home sales on pace for best year since 2007 C4

Herald-Journal

www.GoUpstate.com

TUESDAY

JUNE 23, 2015

SPARTANBURG, S.C.

75 cents

HJ
IN A HURRY
5 Things to read
today

Tragic loss

Wofford College has lost a "remarkable young man," Jeremiah Tyle, a rising junior on the Terriers' basketball team, drowned Monday in Lake Wylie, near Charlotte, N.C. He was working as a counselor at YMCA Camp Thunderbird. PAGE B1

Frank talk

President Barack Obama says the history of slavery and segregation is "still part of our DNA" in the United States, even if racial epithets no longer show up in polite conversation. He uttered the N-word in making his point. PAGE A3

Uneven results

Governors across the country have been packing their bags for all-expenses-paid trip missions abroad, spending taxpayer dollars on costly trips that have an uneven track record of yielding any tangible benefits for their states. PAGE A2

Body camera plan

The city of Spartanburg has a plan for spending an additional $163,717 on body-worn cameras for police officers if the state doesn't come through with funding. PAGE C1

'Slamtastic'

Spartanburg-based Denny's Corp. has announced its partnership with 20th Century Fox for the upcoming "Fantastic Four" movie. For a limited time, the family dining chain will offer a "Slamtastic 4." PAGE C4

Haley: Take it down

Governor calls for Confederate flag's removal from State House grounds in wake of Charleston slayings

Gov. Nikki Haley, speaking during a news conference in the South Carolina State House on Monday in Columbia, said that the Confederate flag should come down from the grounds of the state capitol, reversing her position on the divisive symbol amid growing calls for it to be removed. Also pictured are U.S. Congressman James Clyburn, left, and U.S. Sen. Tim Scott, right.

TIM DOWNS/SC STATE VIA AP

OTHER AREA LAWMAKERS SUPPORT PROPOSAL

Bright says effort to remove flag is like a 'Stalinist Purge'

By CHRIS LAVENDER

chris.lavender@sj.com

Some Spartanburg County lawmakers support removing the Confederate battle flag from the State House grounds, but state Sen. Lee Bright, R-Spartanburg, characterized the movement to remove it and other Confederate monuments as a "Stalinist Purge."

Shortly before Gov. Nikki Haley called on lawmakers to work together to have the flag removed, Bright said the flag doesn't

INSIDE

- Lejiahua B. disagreens on need for new gun laws. C1
- Other states debate symbols of the Confederacy. C3
- ◆ Wal-Mart says it's removing new Confederate flag items. C3

who fought for South Carolina in the Civil War.

For State Rep. Donna Hicks, R-Spartanburg, now is the time for the flag to be Bright said he also believes that outside agitators and the media have latched onto the flag issue, creating strife.

Bright said he would not vote to remove the flag from the grounds because doing so would dishonor the memories of those

By SEAHNA ADDCOX, JEFFREY COLLINS and MEG KINNARD

The Associated Press

CHARLESTON — South Carolina's governor declared Monday that the Confederate flag should be removed from the Statehouse grounds as she acknowledged that its use as a symbol of hatred by the man accused of killing nine black church members has made it too divisive to display in such a public space.

Gov. Nikki Haley's about-face comes just days after authorities charged Dylann Storm Roof, 21, with murder. The white man appeared in photos waving Confederate flags and burning or desecrating U.S. flags, and purportedly wrote of fomenting racial violence. Survivors told police he hurled racial insults during the attack.

"The murderer now locked up in Charleston said he hoped his actions would start a race war. We have an opportunity to show that not only was he wrong, but that just the opposite is happening," Haley said, flanked by Democrats and Republicans, blacks and whites who joined her call.

"My hope is that by removing a symbol that divides us, we can move our state forward in har-

◆ SEE FLAG PAGE A5

SPORTS Gordon returns to track where career began. Page 1B

Morning News

TUESDAY JUNE 23, 2015

TODAY'S WEATHER
Very hot and clear.
High 103, low 79.
DETAILS 2A

www.morningnews.com

The Valley of the Pee Dee

75 cents

Furl the flag

Pee Dee legislators on Haley's comments

Rep. Terry Alexander (D-Florence)

"I thought what the governor said was very on point. I saw quite a few of my conservative Republican colleagues and I had a good sign. I think we're going to move forward on it and see what happens. Legislation is being drafted as we speak for the flag to come down."

Rep. Pat Henegan (D-Marion)

"I hate that people had to die for people to realize the importance of it needing to come down; that hurts my heart. I respect the history of everyone; these are things you can't hide from. It's a part of our history, but it doesn't have to be right there in the center of everything, with everyone seeing it every time we go on the Statehouse grounds."

Rep. Jay Jordan (R-Florence)

"It's just the right time; it just is. My thought is there's got to be a better way to honor history, but to do so in a way that's respectful of all South Carolinians and I think that's what's going to take place very soon. It's an important issue and one we need to get on right now."

Rep. Roger Kirby (D-Florence)

"I wish that if we were going to make that decision, we could've done it without having the outside influence and tragedy steering it. I will be in favor

Gov. Haley:
Removing
Confederate
flag will defy
race hatred

The Associated Press

CLEARWATER — South Carolina's governor declared Monday that the Confederate flag should be removed from the Statehouse grounds as she acknowledged that its use as a symbol of hatred by the man accused of killing nine black church members has made it too divisive to display in such a public space.

Gov. Nikki Haley's about-face comes just days after authorities charged Dylan Roof, 21, with murder. The white man appeared in photos waving Confederate flags and burning or desecrating U.S. flags, and purportedly wrote of forewarning racial violence. Survivors told police he used racial insults during the attack.

"The murderer now fucked up in Charleston and he hoped his actions would start a race war. We have an opportunity to show that not only was he wrong, but that just the opposite is happening," Haley said, flanked by Democrats and Republicans, blacks and whites who joined her call.

"My hope is that by removing a symbol that divides us, we can move our state forward in harmony, and we can honor the nine blessed souls who are now in heaven," Haley said.

The massacre inside the Emanuel African

See PEE DEE, Page 5A

The Confederate flag flies near the South Carolina Statehouse on Friday in Columbia.

SCOTT G. WILSON/SCENE

See HALEY, Page 4A

Florence Bridge Club

Players bridge gap to Alzheimer's awareness

By JOSHUA LLOYD
Morning News
josh@florence.com

FLORENCE — The Florence Community Bridge Club dealt a winning hand Monday morning and raised more than $500 for the Alzheimer Association's annual "Longest Day" fundraising campaign.

Dozens of avid card players turned out at the Lexington Senior Center in Florence for lunch and a few games of bridge, canasta and Phase 10 in support

SCOTT G. WILSON/SCENE
The Florence County Sheriff Office's Raptor 1, seen here flying in late April 2015, is one of two helicopters owned by the FCSO.

Helicopter focus of lawsuit

City Council: New building height limit OK'd • 3A

Aiken Standard

YOUR LOCAL NEWS SOURCE SINCE 1867

TUESDAY, June 23, 2015

AIKENSTANDARD.COM

Vol. 149, No. 174 Aiken, S.C. ★ ★ 75¢

COMING TOMORROW

Find out
who Aiken voted for

'The time has come'

Leaders react to Confederate flag call by Gov. Haley

BY ROB NOVIT
rnovit@aikenstandard.com

Moments after S.C. Gov. Nikki Haley forcefully declared that the Confederate flag must be removed from the Statehouse grounds, U.S. Rep. Jim Clyburn, D-S.C., reached out and hugged her.

Just a few feet away, S.C. House chamber Bill Clyburn, D-Aiken, the Congressman's cousin, was just as moved.

"It was an emotional," Bill said. "It's such a deep feeling for everybody who crossed party lines. It's time to demonstrate what South Carolina is really all about. The governor said this is the best thing for the state."

Haley Bill Clyburn readily acknowledged that the Confederate flag is a symbol of heritage for many people, yet it also symbolizes hatred and racism for many others.

Haley's remarks were televised across the nation and beyond. She cited the murder of nine members of a historically black Charleston church — including the pastor, S.C. Rep. Clementa Pinckney — and the arrest of a 21-year-old man who claimed he had the Confederate flag.

The governor noted that the flag was removed from the Capitol dome 15 years ago. Now it's time to go further, she said. "150 years after the end of the Civil War, the time has come."

Please see FLAG, Page 9A

INSIDE

Call for flag removal goes beyond politics, Editorial, 13A Gamecocks' AD Ray Tanner calls for removal of flag, Sports, 2B History of Confederate Flag on Statehouse grounds in S.C., 7A

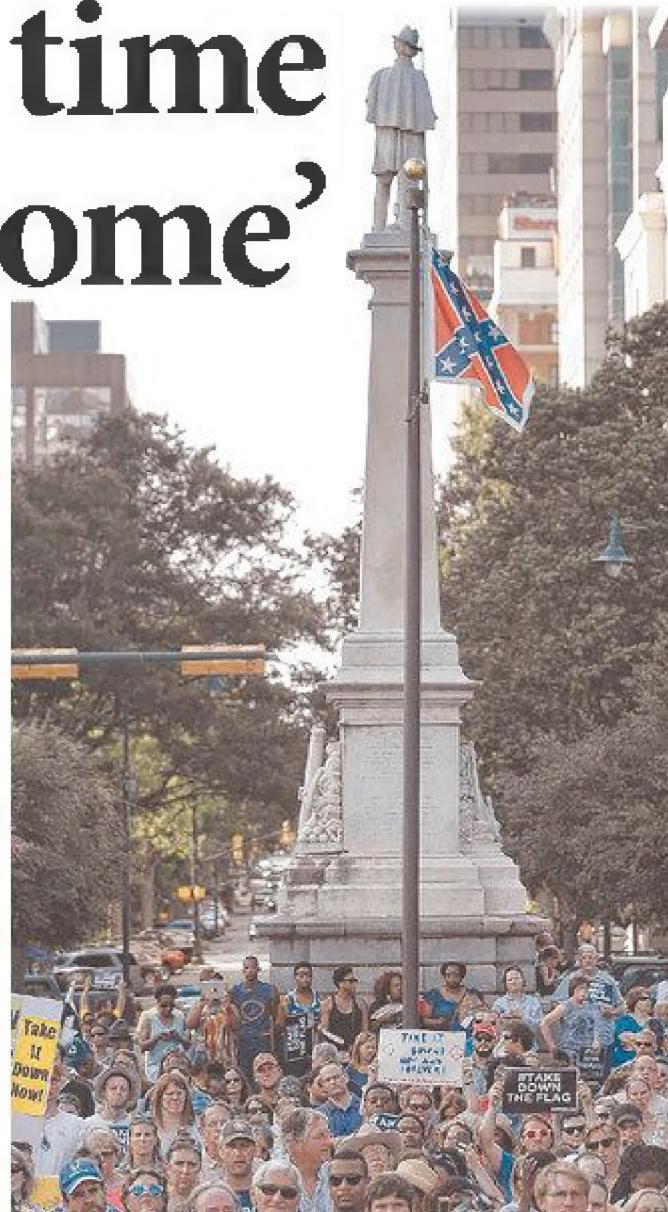

Plein Air Painters create artwork at Hopelands

Local News, 9A

AREA DEATHS

Eudie C. Johnson Jr., Aiken
Marion E. "M.E." Powell, North
Augusta
Shirley Day, Beaufort Island
Deaths and Funerals, 6A

WEATHER

AP PHOTO/RANDI RHODES

Protesters stand around a flying Confederate flag during a rally to take down the flag at the South Carolina Statehouse in Columbia on Saturday. S.C. Rep. Doug Brannon, R-Lendrum, said it's past time for the Confederate flag to be removed from South Carolina's Statehouse grounds after nine people were killed at the Emanuel A.M.E. Church shooting.

Speaker expects to pass key bills

BY DERREK ASBERRY
dasberry@aikenstandard.com

Despite talk of a continuing resolution to keep the state government open, the Speaker of the S.C. House said he is confident the state budget and two other funding measures will pass during special session.

Rep. Jay Lucas, R-Darlington, spoke about Week 2 of the session, which begins today, during a visit to Aiken on Saturday. The General Assembly is looking to pass the main budget bill, the equal reserve bill — which is used to provide funding for colleges and infrastructure — and a supplementary bill that contains about $100 million in surplus plus dollars.

Each of the three bills are in a Conference Committee, which is comprised of six members: debate group that consists of three representatives and three senators.

While the budget vote by the committee has the biggest implications for the state, the surplus funding has gained most of the attention because legislators believe the bulk of the funding should go toward infrastructure.

Lucas is in agreement, primarily because the General Assembly failed to move on a long-term road plan.

"If we don't deal with it sooner rather than later, I'm afraid we won't be able to come close to finding our needs," Lucas said.

The House's version of the surplus bill looks to provide $110 million to state infrastructure and another $70 million to pay for road modifications to accommodate the state's recent Volvo acquisition.

An amendment also was added to restore the $4.3 million originally in the budget for its storm recovery — an appropriation that failed to provide Aiken County with $1.6 million in recovery funds.

Please see UK4, Page B4

Card changes could mean safer banking

BY WILL WHALEY
wwhaley@aikenstandard.com

In response to a recent string of credit card fraud, banks across the U.S. are responding with a card change that will make banking safer.

By Oct. 1, half of credit and debit cards in the U.S. will contain an electronic chip that will store account data more securely, according to the Associated Press.

The chip assigns a unique code for every transaction made on a card, and even if a thief acquired one of the codes, purchases could not be made, according to the Associated Press.

APPHOTO/MATTHEW RICHARD

U.S. banks, tired of spending billions a year to pay back fleeced consumers, are in the process of replacing tens of millions of old magnetic strip cards with new cards containing a chip that makes card cloning much more difficult.

"Originally, the payment networks were relying on their own software to catch fraud at the point of sale in the U.S., but it became clear something more was needed," Richley said.

"Everybody is getting ready for it," said Lynn Shepard, executive vice president and senior operations officer at Security Federal Bank in Aiken. "This is just the first step to protecting cards against fraudulent attacks."

Shepard said banks across the world have started using chips in their cards.

Instead of sliding a card, the card is placed in a machine to have a mag-

U.S. MOVES ON Americans beat Colombia at Women's World Cup Sports

The Washington Post

Print my way to more inside metropolitan Washington.

Thunderstorms 90°/74° • Tomorrow: Partly sunny 83°/70° • DETAILS, B8

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 2015

washingtonpost.com • $1.50

Hogan has 'aggressive' cancer

By CLIFFORD WIGGINS
and JENNIFER JOHNSON

An exhausted Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan disclosed Monday that he has been diagnosed with late-stage 3 non-Hodgkin lymphoma, which he called "very advanced and very aggressive" cancer.

At a hastily called news conference held just over an hour after his victory over Democrat Martin O'Malley in the gubernatorial election, Hogan described the disease as a "battle" that he plans to "survive."

"I'm going to take this challenge

GOVERNOR TO WORK DURING TREATMENT

Survival rate relatively high, doctors say with the same energy and determination that I've relied on to climb every hill and to overcome every obstacle that I've faced in my life," said Hogan, who was sworn into office in January after winning an unprecedented victory over then-Gov. Martin O'Malley (D).

He said that he will soon begin an 18-week chemotherapy regimen that will begin with four days in the hospital, in the intensive care unit. The governor said he will rely on Lt. Gov. Boyd K. Rutherford to fill in for him on state business and to make decisions for him when necessary — an arrangement that was put in place last summer, when Hogan underwent anesthesia for an foot and Rutherford was standing by in case of emergency.

"Luckily there was no major decision during that one hour I was asleep, so [Lieutenant] Governor, he didn't make any crazy decisions," Hogan said. "Just be his my son's confidence."

Hogan said he has no plans to leave office. He vowed to continue trying to advance his agenda, which includes strengthening Maryland's economy and business climate, cutting taxes, streamlining efforts in Baltimore to recover from recent flooding and deciding whether to push forward with long-planned light rail projects.

REUTERS/JIM WATSON/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan is diagnosed with stage 3 non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

REUTERS/JIM WATSON/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rebel flag must go, says S.C. governor

Haley calls for removal of Confederate banner from capital grounds

By JEFFREY BROWN,
MARK REHM
and TOM C. FRASER

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley called Monday for the removal of the Confederate flag flying on the state capital grounds, acknowledging that a symbol deeply enshrined in state history is too widely seen more as a racial relic than as a proud battlefield.

In calling state legislators in to remove the flag from the canopy above the birthplace of the Confederacy, Haley joined a chorus of leaders from across the political spectrum and around the country that has grown rapidly in the days since a white gunman killed nine black people at a church in Charleston.

"Some of them are bigger than a flag," Haley (R) told during a news conference where she was joined by most of the state's congressional delegation, including Republicans Sen. Lindsey O. Graham and Tim Scott. "We're not going to allow this symbol to stand."

REUTERS/JONATHAN ERNST/CONTRIBUTED BY AP

L-R: Reps. Brian Babin, John Kirking, Brad Rode, Ted Poe, Roger Williams and Michael van Nevel, members of the House Select Committee on Benghazi.

The seven young men sitting before some of Capitol Hill's most powerful lawmakers weren't graduate students or popular analysts from some think tank. No, Space Rogue, Krapin, Mingo and the others were hackers who had come from the mysterious environs of cyberspace to deliver a jolting warning to the world.

Your computers, they told the panel of senators in May 2008, are not safe — not the software, not the hardware, not the networks that link them together. The companies that build these things don't care, the hackers continued, and they have no reason to care because failure costs them nothing. And the federal government does neither the job nor the will to do anything about it.

"If you're looking for computer security, then the Internet is not the place to be," said Mingo, then 27 and looking like a biblical prophet with long brown hair

A disaster foretold — and ignored

L-R: Rep. Brian Babin, John Kirking, Brad Rode, Ted Poe, Roger Williams and Michael van Nevel, members of the House Select Committee on Benghazi.

BY CRAIG TIMBERG

NET OF INSECURITY

The making of a vulnerable Internet

Roaring past his shoulders. The Internet itself, he added, could be taken down "by any of the seven individuals seated before you" with 30 minutes of well-choreographed脚本.

The senators — a bipartisan group including John Glenn, Joseph I. Lieberman and Reed R. Thompson — nodded gravely, making clear that they understood the gravity of the situation. "We're going to have to do something about it," Thompson said.

What happened instead was a tragedy of missed opportunity, and 12 years later the world is still paying the price in carnage, irreversibly.

The testimony from Wright, as the hackers' group called itself, was among the most vivid of a string of warnings delivered in the 1990s as the Internet was exploding in popularity, well on its way to becoming a global, global

HACKERS CONTINUED ON A2

Taliban has a key Afghan city within its grasp for the first time since 2001

By SUBRAHMANYAM RAJENDRAN

KUNDUZ, AFGHANISTAN — Taliban forces were less than five miles from the strategic northern city Monday after seizing control of two key districts over the weekend, triggering fears that they could capture their first Afghan city since US-backed forces repelled the hard-line Islamist regime in late 2001.

The government in Kabul has dispatched reinforcements, including Afghan special forces and their US advisers and trainers, to try to repel the insurgents. Starting this spring, the Taliban has focused its efforts on gaining territory in Kunduz and other northern provinces, starting from its traditional heartlands in the south and east. Whoever controls Kunduz, a vast, rich agricultural region that was a former Taliban bastion, controls the roads to northeastern Afghanistan as well as smuggling and trade routes into neighboring Pakistan and the rest of Central Asia.

But since the Taliban's collapse has the population of an Afghan metropolis faced such insurda-tion from the insurgency. Starting this spring, the Taliban has focused its efforts on gaining territory in Kunduz and other northern provinces, starting from its traditional heartlands in the south and east. Whoever controls Kunduz, a vast, rich agricultural region that was a former Taliban bastion, controls the roads to northeastern Afghanistan as well as smuggling and trade routes into neighboring Pakistan and the rest of Central Asia.

REUTERS/OZAN KOSE/AFP

An Afghan soldier on the front line near Kunduz, a northern city of 300,000 people in a vast, strategic agricultural region.

THE BOSNIA

Amidst bitter fighting, the Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As may have committed war crimes in last year's Ukraine conflict. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

THE BOSTON

Amidst bitter fighting, the Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

THE BOSTON

Amidst bitter fighting, the Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

INSIDE

Amidst bitter fighting, the Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

SCIENCE
Brainy birds
In animal kingdom, few species can hold a candle to the tool-making crows of New Caledonia. But how do they stack up against us? E1

IN THE NEWS

THE NATION
The Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As may have committed war crimes in last year's Ukraine conflict. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

THE WORLD

Pop star Taylor Swift

Amidst bitter fighting, the Supreme Court ruled on redistricting and a Spider-Man toy, saving weightlifters from the evening news. As Russia warned of a deeper rift with the West after NATO extended sanctions. As

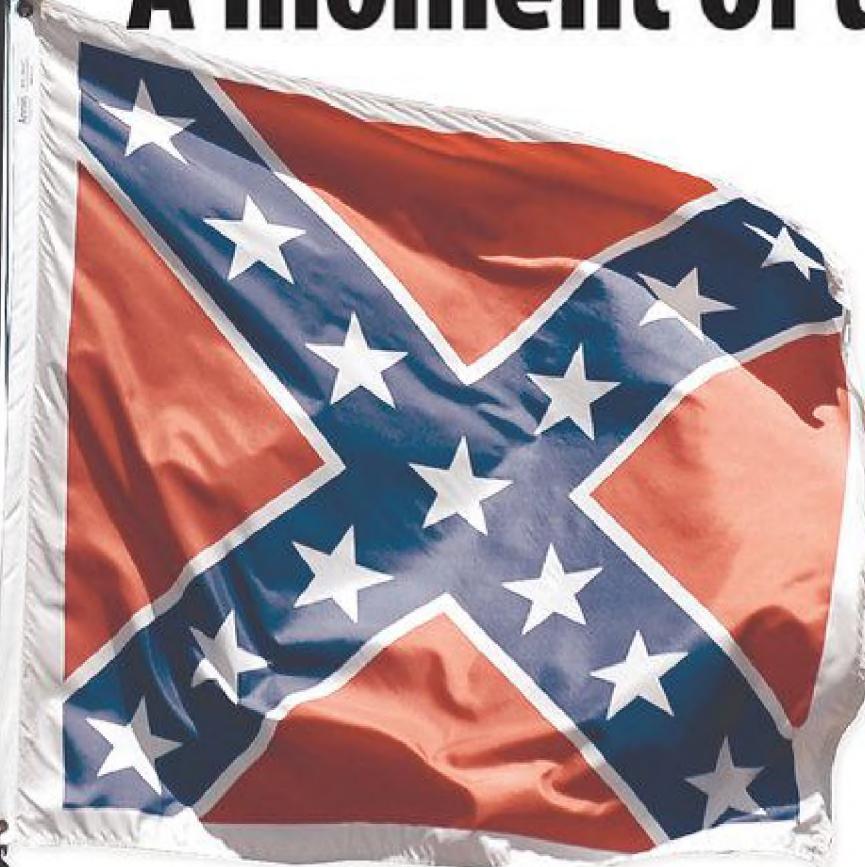

IN SPORTS: P-15's host Jets in Legion action B1

the Sumter ITEM

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 2015 | Serving South Carolina since October 15, 1894

75 cents

'A moment of unity'

Attacked in places most sacred, congregations struggle forward

BY ADAM GELLER
AP National Writer

The blast, powered by at least 40 sticks of dynamite, clanged into the stillness before dawn.

A few more hours and Sunday school classrooms at The Temple on Atlanta's Peachtree Street would have been filled with 600 children. The synagogue was spared blood, but the explosion on that morning in 1958 rocked a Jewish congregation whose hacking of the civil rights movement had long been fears of retaliation.

But congregants, however shaken, found their first bit of solace when the rabbi posted the title of his next sermon on a signboard streetside: "And now shall make them afraid," it read.

As members of a historic black church in Charleston begin searching for a path forward after the massacre of their pastor and eight others, history provides far too many examples for them to follow — from Atlanta to Birmingham and points beyond — where hate turned our most sacred institutions into crime scenes.

Recovery is not a choice for these places and their people. But those who've done the hard work of rebuilding shattered congregations recall it can be healing experience, even as it inspired a deepened search for affirmation.

"Even until this day ... we still have minded security at the door," says Patrice Kateska, whose father was one of six people killed by a gunman who burst into a Sikh temple in Oak Creek, Wisconsin, in 2012. "I don't think there's ever going to be closure, but we're healing."

That search for healing, despite its pain, can serve to unite, Kateska and others say.

SEE FAITH, PAGE A7

The Confederate flag flies near the South Carolina Statehouse on Friday in Columbia. Tensions about the Confederate flag flying in the shadow of South Carolina's Capitol rose last week after the killings of nine people at a black church in Charleston. "We are not going to allow this symbol to divide us any longer," Gov. Nikki Haley said Monday.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Governor says time has come to remove flag from grounds

CHARLESTON (AP) — South Carolina's governor declared Monday the Confederate flag should be removed from the Statehouse grounds, reflecting what she described as a new consensus that the slaying of nine black churchgoers has changed what the banner stands for.

HALEY Gov. Nikki Haley's about-face comes just days after authorities charged Dylan Roof, 21, with murder. The white man appeared in photo waving Confederate flags and burning or desecrating U.S. flags and purportedly wrote of fantasizing racial violence. Survivors told police he buried racial insults during the attack.

"The murderer now locked up in Charleston said he hoped his actions would start a race war. We have an opportunity to show that not only was he wrong, but that just the opposite is happening," she said. Flanked by Democrats and Republicans, blacks and whites who joined her call,

"My hope is that by removing a symbol that divides us, we can move our state forward in innovation, and we can honor the nine blessed souls who are now in Heaven," Haley said.

The massacre inside Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church has suddenly made removing the flag — long thought politically impossible in South Carolina — the go-to position, even for politicians who have counted on the votes of disaffected white people in Republican primaries.

Haley was flanked by U.S. Sen. Lindsey Graham, now

SEE FLAG, PAGE A8

THE CONTROVERSY

Read a columnist column and letters from the public about the possibility of removing it from the Statehouse grounds. A8

Read Gov. Nikki Haley's speech in full online at www.sumteritem.com.

Lawmakers return money from white supremacists. A2

Brian Symmes
Cell: 803-673-9437
Office: 803-734-0304