Subject: [DatawNet] a happy ending for Daisy Cat

Neighbors,

Who doesn't love a story with a happy ending? Remember the pitiful pictures I sent you a couple of days ago of an orange cat hanging around Dataw? Well, that cat is now reunited with his owner, a boater who occasionally uses the Dataw marina. So, of course you have guessed that the boy cat named Daisy jumped ship about two weeks ago. One of our DIFF volunteers started feeding him just a few days after that, so Daisy didn't go hungry for long. When I sent out the SOS email, Rett Bootle at the marina remembered being told by a boater of a missing cat, and she immediately forwarded the information on to him. Great compassion and detective work on her part!

The boater was really happy and excited that Daisy was found and made arrangements to come from Charleston to pick him up the minute we had him trapped. That exchange happened this morning, and I have been told that Daisy was so happy to see his owner that he purred and cried at the same time! The owner will take Daisy to a Charleston vet immediately for a checkup and neutering. (That awful looking bald tail is actually the result of being shaved to treat a wound after Daisy got into a fight down in Florida.) We think the owner is now convinced that a neutered Daisy will be a happier Daisy and a Daisy far less likely to get into scrapes.

See, I told you it is a story with a happy ending. Sometimes we are all lucky enough to get one of those.
