Beverly,

According to the Phoenix price list, the DLIPC cost was $19,435.00 per unit plus $5465.00 for the credential printer. The high cost on the PC is a result of the fact that machines cost more money five years ago when the system was spec'ed out than they do today. It also figures in the cost of all the software, which is significant, and the camera mast which is also a very expensive piece of equipment. I can spec out a new model machine and gain some cost savings, but that would take some time. How quickly does Mr. Hale need this information?

Philip

I received a call from Wayne Hale with the Election Commission inquiring about the cost of the DLIPC machines. He says that they are contemplating introducing new legislation that will require a picture ID on voter registration cards and need some prices for the technology. Do you have something that I can send to him? Specifically, I would think the cost for the actual machine and the computer so that a data base can be created. Beverly
