Oh you inferred it! No worries. I think I was emailing my thoughts. :) Thanks for your help.

Today Georgia issued a State of Emergency, and we can declare one based on their emergency, so I am on to the backup plan. We didn't have that option yesterday. I just cleared that plan to take the stress off. Sounds like we will have the letter tomorrow.

Okay. Well, he probably would have said if we were not included. So we should be good.

Mr. Hartley says they are typing the order now so he is hopeful it will be out later today. They wanted to include all the states in the order. You're not bothering me at all. I understand the urgency.

Any luck? Our State of Emergency runs out today. Really would like to get this issued and filed today, or will have to work on a different process tomorrow. Sorry to pester!

We are planning to keep the current weight/height restrictions in place for 120 days or until an EO rescinds them, whichever is less. This is based on our interpretation of the current EO 2016-28. Is this correct?

Yes - but we already have the weight/height restrictions in place. So it will just be HOS. Thanks!

I am trying to contact Chris Hartley from FMCSA now. He told me yesterday that they were planning to poll all of the affected states to determine their needs as well. I believe they are hoping to issue one order to cover all the states that need an extension. I will update you as soon as I get a response from Mr. Hartley.

Do you plan to issue another ED similar to 2015-29 from last year's flood?

John,

Do you know what the turn-around time is for the FMCSA approval of an additional HOS waiver? Just planning - we are getting calls on the HOS that ends tomorrow, and we know that our State of Emergency ends today, so I am trying to field questions. Didn't know if they typically respond in 24 hours?

Thanks.
