Yeah, I was actually going to talk to you about this next time we get together. I have a lot of background on this and have spent a good bit of time in the last year working with Tony Keck and the Nurse-Family Partnership folks to pull together a SIB pilot here. I also have a handful of other prospective applications for the model here. And Sen. Alexander has introduced generic SIB-enabling legislation which I'm going to work with him to clean up. The major obstacle is getting the anti-reformers to be a little more open-minded on procurement, since some of the contracts associated with SIBs can be a little creative sometimes.

See below, interesting study, while I don't think the SIB concept is needed for energy efficiency funding, we need a study in this style. Note the funders.

Hayne,

Am no expert by far on this. Am trying to send a link)below) which has a report on this. In it is an executive summary which describes what they are in the context of pilot initiatives in the UK

In terms of the social sector practice, the Firm started such a practice a few years ago to serve nonprofits, NGOs, foundations, and the like

Hope this helps a little. Happy to explore further if you like

Cheers!

Ozey
