We're Off This Week: Looking Ahead to September

We're not releasing an Insight this week as we approach the unofficial end of summer and the Labor Day weekend. Hopefully you can enjoy one last adventure in the summer weather before the pace of the world picks up again.

Here's a quick look at what's ahead in September: Antonio Oftelie has another blog post coming up Then, we pick back up with the 2013 Shared Services Summit videos: Look for Rowan Miranda's presentation on University of Michigan, and the great presentation from NASA Shared Services.

There's plenty of video content to get out to you guys, and we're working hard to make sure that happens. See you next week!

Community Assistance: Making Sure You Can Log In

We want to make sure that you, the practitioners, are able to get the most out of the site. In order for that to happen, you need to be logged in to the Community of Practice. During this quiet week, we want to again take a moment to offer our assistance in making sure you can log in.

If you have tried logging in to the Community, but were unsuccessful, or have misplaced your username or password, we'd love to personally help you out.

If you'd like your username and password reset, and sent to you, or you'd like some personal assistance logging in to the Community of Practice, please contact us. We're more than happy to assist you, and making sure you can log in to the site is our top priority. We are here to help, so please don't be shy and contact us!
