THOR Shield™ Mobile Emergency
Communications Program

intrado

"THOR performed flawlessly and was a great asset to Union County."

Director of Emergency Communications for Union County, N.C., Larry Brinker stated, "We were all very impressed with the advanced technology used aboard the two-story, 80-foot-long fully mobile 9-1-1 center." Call takers and dispatchers literally walked across the parking lot from the regular office and worked their normal 12-hour shifts with virtually no disruption to their daily routine. And, because the THOR Shield equipment matched what was already in place, it was a smooth transition from one work environment to the other. According to Brinker, his staff was able to maintain daily operations seamlessly and answer calls around the clock despite severe weather including lightning that struck the county building housing the emergency communications center. "During one storm, the wind and rain were so extreme we were worried it would be necessary to vacate THOR and yet the impressive, fully operational vehicle withstood the stormy environment without any trouble. In the end, THOR performed flawlessly and was a great asset to Union County during the two week period we were displaced from our normal environment."
