Erin Elizabeth Not to crush anyone's romance but that climb is brutal and it's normally only $4 to do it 🙄🙄🙄

Kay Blakely Erin Elizabeth Doing it at night is a completely different experience!!

Steve Anderson Where does the money go that is collected for climbing the lighthouse?
at 21:44:04 on 1/27/2020 UTC

Jeff Atkins Steve Anderson it goes to the daily operation of SC State Parks, because they have been directed by the Director of SC Parks Recreation and Tourism ( a cabinet level agency director is appointed by the Governor) to be self-sufficient through user fees. The park staff has to work hard to come up with programs and services that generate revenue while still be sustainable to the resource. It is very difficult to do both.

Carl Berube Calvin LeNeve it is $2 now per person. Since 2005 or before, I think. It used to be free but it was in really bad shape then.

Diane Robie Foster I am 68 with a bad knee and I don't find it a brutal climb . There are landings every 19 steps where you can read info and catch your breath.

Steve Anderson Jeff Atkins I thought it went for the preservation of the lighthouse

at 1:23:32 on 1/28/2020 UTC

Jeff Atkins Calvin LeNeve I agree. I don't like anyone being priced out of parks. Best to tell the elected officials.

at 3:19:03 on 1/28/2020 UTC

Jeff Atkins Steve Anderson it does. The lighthouse is expensive to maintain, so the amount of money raised at the lighthouse will be spent on the lighthouse.

Jessy Spikey Wayles Erin Elizabeth I used to jog up it to open/close it when I worked there. It was fun!

And yeah the price is high BUT you get to see the view with only a handful of people and it's after the park closes. Seems like a great deal to me! So many people don't get to see the beach at night from that height

AnnaKate Davis Stalker Erin Elizabeth Limited people and the opportunity to watch sunset and moonrise. I have done one and sunrise and I'll gladly pay the money for both. Especially to keep a beautiful place I love open and operating.
